Accurate Case Outcome Modeling Arch G.

Woodside 2019-11-15 This volume advocates accurate case outcome prediction that does not rely on symmetric modeling. To that end, it provides theory construction and testing applications in several sub-disciplines of business and the social sciences to illustrate how to move away from symmetric theory construction. Each chapter constructs case outcome theory and includes empirical analysis of outcomes. Chapter 1 provides a foundation of symmetric variable directional-relationship theory construction and null hypothesis significance testing versus asymmetric case outcome theory construction and somewhat precise outcome testing, while Chapters 2–6 investigate these principles through a range of applications. This volume will be very useful to researchers and professionals in manufacturing, service, consulting, management, marketing, organizational studies, and more. It will also be an excellent resource for advanced statistics students in building and testing case outcome models. Data sets are included so that readers can replicate findings presented in each chapter, and grow to present and test additional theories.

Recipes for the Immigrant Experience. Food Descriptions in Five Ethnic American Novels Erlin Theunynck 2012 The importance of food and foodways for people in general cannot be contested. This is one of the reasons why several authors of ethnic American literature have used descriptions of food and foodways abundantly in their novels. Female authors like Cristina Garcia, Jhuma Lahiri, Brenda Jackson, Monique Truong and Amy Tan have all written novels that use food descriptions to portray specifics about the ethnic experience in the United States. The food descriptions are not only interesting because of their exotic dimension, but more importantly because of their symbolical meaning. What can be said about these descriptions is that they form a sort of recipe for the immigrant experience. The universal language of food proves to be the language of choice for these authors who want open a window to the ethnic experience.

A Recipe for Gentrification Alison Hope Alkon
2020-07-14 How gentrification uproots the urban food landscape, and what activists are doing to resist it From hipster coffee shops to upscale restaurants, a bustling local food scene is perhaps the most commonly recognized harbinger of gentrification. A

Recipe for Gentrification explores this widespread phenomenon, showing the ways in which food and gentrification are deeply—and, at times, controversially—intertwined. Contributors provide an inside look at gentrification in different cities, from major hubs like New York and Los Angeles to smaller cities like Cleveland and Durham. They examine a wide range of food enterprises—including grocery stores, restaurants, community gardens, and farmers' markets—to provide up-to-date perspectives on why gentrification takes place, and how communities use food to push back against displacement. Ultimately, they unpack the consequences for vulnerable people and neighborhoods. A Recipe for Gentrification highlights how the everyday practices of growing, purchasing and eating food reflect the rapid—and contentious—changes taking place in American cities in the twenty-first century.

The Complexity Turn Arch G. Woodside

2017-02-16 This book takes the reader beyond net effects and main and interaction effects thinking and methods. Complexity theory includes the tenet that recipes are more important than ingredients—any one antecedent (X) condition is insufficient for a consistent outcome (Y) (e.g., success or failure) even though the presence of certain antecedents may be necessary. A second tenet: modeling contrarian cases is useful because a high or low score for any given antecedent condition (X) associates with a high Y, low Y, and is irrelevant for high/low Y in some recipes in the same data set. Third tenet: equifinality happens—several recipes indicate high/low outcomes.

many of which have been forgotten, are embellished with photographs and personal narratives that make the dishes all the more special and worth sharing. About the Author: Angelo F. Comsti has long been working with food. He is a food writer, food stylist, recipe developer and demo cook. He recently added more titles to his credentials—as a bona fide chef, graduating from Le Cordon Bleu in Sydney and becoming a deli owner, heading the kitchen operations of The Food Barn, a neighbourhood snack bar serving gourmet sandwiches. Pa Pa Tuck's Cookbook Peter E. Tucker 2009-10 In today's world of fast food and packaged meals, modern families lack the skills to prepare home-cooked meals. But eating homemade food is not only healthier and cheaper, it brings back valuable family time that is often missed at the drive-through window. Out to change all that, Pa Pa Tuck's Cook Book is more than just a book of recipes. It is a step-by-step guide for first-time cooks that teaches them how to prepare such classic family feasts as baked smoked ham, Christmas pasta, homemade bread, Great Gram's corn chowder, and much more. If you are looking to bring your family to the dinner table again, this book will inspire you to create a new family tradition of cooking that will be shared for generations. For Peter Tucker, the process of cooking is as important as the product. Meals are a family affair meant to create memories and a strong family bond. His inspiration comes from his 101-year-old Great Gram, who used to say, "The way to a man's heart is through his stomach." The meals in Pa Pa Tuck's have been passed down through his family for six generations. He sees the book as a way to share his recipes with a new generation of readers.
